

Differences between Northern and Southern States

The economy in the northern part of the United States was more industrialized, meaning they relied more on the making of goods. Northern states did not believe slavery was necessary, so they wanted the new states created out of the western territory to be "free states".

The economy in the southern part of the United States was more agricultural, meaning they relied more on farming and slave labor. Since they needed slaves to work on plantations, the southern states wanted new states to be "slave states".

The economy in the southern part of the United States was more agricultural, meaning they relied more on farming and slave labor. Since they needed slaves to work on plantations, the southern states wanted new states to be "slave states".

The economy in the southern part of the United States was more agricultural, meaning they relied more on farming and slave labor. Since they needed slaves to work on plantations, the southern states wanted new states to be "slave states".

